Hoffman, in his great work on the Coins of France, states that this piece and the succeeding lot were coined for the French-Indian Company (Mississippi Company) at the instance of John Law, the noted financier and projector of the great Mississippi Company, one of the greatest financial bubbles that ever ruined a nation. See Hoffman, Plate 112, No. 84.

Law first established his bank in Paris in 1716, and, having gained the confidence of the king, it soon became the general financial concern of the French nation, its paper currency bringing twenty times its original value and, in 1719, amounting to eighty times the circulating coin of the whole nation. It is presumed that the demand for a metallic currency in America was an incentive for the issuance of this coin; however that may be, it is seldom the coin is offered in sales here.
